

Consent and Non-Disclosure Form for The Community Storytelling Composition Project (CSCP)

The CSCP will be using audio recordings of the individuals who voluntarily share their voices, narratives, and stories for the “Call for Justice” performance project. The final project will not be identifying any of the individual’s participating in the project by name or image if they choose. However, all participants must acknowledge there will be no vocal manipulation to disguise the voices presented.

Additionally, there will be a digital archive on The CSCP website in which the entire, unedited version of the personal narrative will be shared for anyone to access. These archived pieces can also be anonymous. If the storyteller chooses not to be anonymous, the story can be linked to personal websites and social media pages.

In the consideration of the above, I hear by grant Kayleigh Stack & The Community Storytelling Composition Project permission to utilize the audio recording of my voice and stories I voluntarily shared for a performance piece and digital archive presented by the project. I acknowledge that while the project facilitator, Kayleigh Stack, will go through the effort to protect all identities of those participating, she will not be using a voice machine to disguise the vocals and therefore, by way of voice recognition alone all parties involved must acknowledge and consent to the chance of being identified.

I hereby acknowledge the intention of the audio recordings and consent to having them shared by The CSCP. I also waive and release any right to compensation* for, and ownership of, such audio of me to Kayleigh Stack and The CSCP. I am aware that compensation at this point will be offered in the form of having my story shared on a digital archive, having segments of my story integrated into a soundtrack, as well as the option to perform my story within the context of the final performance.

I have read this consent and release and agree to its terms and conditions
